

Switched On: A History of Regional Commercial Television in Australia

Michael Thurlow

Bachelor of Journalism

Master of Research

This thesis is presented for the degree of

Doctor of Philosophy

Macquarie University

Department of Media, Music, Communication and Cultural Studies

27 December 2019

Front cover image: Wolfgang Sievers, Television set at Ballarat television station by architects Hassell and McConnell, 1962, photograph, 19.4cm x 23.7cm, National Library of Australia (3309233).

Table of Contents

Abstract	i
Statement of Candidate	iii
Acknowledgements	iv
Abbreviations	vi
Call-signs	xi
Figures	xiv
Tables	xvii
Introduction	1
Phase 1: Establishment (to 1966)	29
Chapter 1: Power and Politics	31
Chapter 2: Monopolies and Manoeuvres	77
Phase 2: Development (1966-76)	149
Chapter 3: Dualities and Downturns	151
Chapter 4: Colour and Contrasts	213
Phase 3: Maturation (1976-86)	273
Chapter 5: Prosperity and Promise	275
Chapter 6: Security and Status	336
Phase 4: Equalisation (1986-99)	413
Chapter 7: Aggregation and Aggravation	415
Chapter 8: Patronage and Protection	461
Phase 5: Disruption (2000-19)	493
Chapter 9: Incumbency and Influence	495
Chapter 10: Reform and Rationalisation	539
Conclusion	601

Appendices.....	611
Section 1: Licencing and establishment data	614
Section 2: Operational and financial data.....	635
Section 3: Program data.....	654
Section 4: Ownership and control data.....	677
Section 5: Shareholder data.....	688
Section 6: Technical data.....	704
Bibliography	714

Abstract

This thesis offers the first sustained history of regional commercial television in Australia. It challenges previous scholarship which positions that history as a mere extension of – or footnote in – the development of Australia's three metropolitan commercial television networks. Rather, this study argues that regional commercial television was, at its height, a significant and independent industry at the economic and social centre of regional communities, employing around 2,000 people and producing many hours of programs for local audiences. It then traces and examines key developments which have resulted in regional commercial television being dominated by three super-networks which largely operate as “slaves” to their metropolitan “masters” with minimal local production.

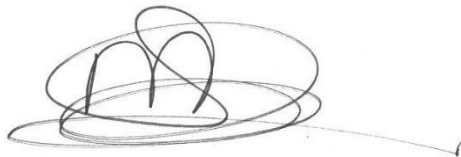

The project analyses data from interviews, government files, company records, photographs, manuscripts and audio-visual material held in the National Archives of Australia, National Film and Sound Archive, local, state and national libraries, station archives and private collections. The result is a periodised industrial history which traces the establishment, development, maturation, equalisation and disruption of regional commercial television. This broad-brush approach is enhanced through the inclusion of individual station case studies.

This analysis reveals that regional stations initially achieved a balance between local relevance, community involvement, operational efficiency, innovative programming, independent ownership and financial viability. It then demonstrates – through the use of a unique localism-independence index – how political, technological, economic and social forces have, over a 60-year period, resulted in the irrevocable merging of metropolitan and regional commercial television interests.

In many respects, the current structure of regional commercial television emulates a model which was first proposed by metropolitan media interests in the 1950s. Ongoing threats to the regional commercial television business model point to the possible future demise of the industry as a distinct entity. In this context, this thesis makes a significant contribution to recording the history of a rapidly changing and evolving industry which has held an important role in the economic and social development of regional Australia.

Statement of Candidate

I certify that the work in this thesis entitled Switched On: A History of Regional Commercial Television in Australia has not previously been submitted for a degree nor has it been submitted as part of the requirements for a degree to any other university or institution other than Macquarie University. I also certify that the thesis is an original piece of research and it has been written by me. Any help and assistance that I have received in my research work and the preparation of the thesis itself have been appropriately acknowledged. In addition, I certify that all information sources and literature used are indicated in the thesis. The research presented in this thesis was approved by Macquarie University Ethics Review Committee, reference number 5201600404, effective 9 June 2016. This research meets the requirements of the National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research (2007).

Michael Thurlow (43557600)

27 December 2019

orcid.org/0000-0002-5646-781X

Acknowledgements

This project was made possible by the efforts of numerous individuals and organisations. I am grateful to Macquarie University for providing the scholarship and facilities to pursue my academic goals and develop my research skills. I particularly wish to acknowledge the assistance provided by the Macquarie University Library staff in obtaining hundreds of interlibrary loans, as well as the MMCCS radio facilities staff, especially Peter Ring.

I would like to thank the State Libraries of New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia and Western Australia, the National Library of Australia, the National Archives of Australia (especially Pamela Barnetta in Sydney) and the National Film and Sound Archive (especially Simon Drake in Sydney) for their assistance.

I am extremely grateful to the Prime, WIN, Southern Cross, Seven, Nine and Imparja television networks for providing information and archival material. Most importantly, a project of this scope and scale would not have been possible without the participation of past and present regional commercial television employees and their families: John Allott, David Astley, Amber Austin-Wright, Natalie Barr, Dick and Ursula Barton, Sylvia Bauers, Rhonda Bowen, Barry Brady, Remi Broadway, Steven Byers, Matt Cable, Shirley Cahill, Ian Cameron, Brian Carle, Sharon Carleton, Janelle Chapman, Russell Cheek, Barry Coleman, Jo-Anne Cracknell, Wes Crook, Alex Cullen, Peter Cummiskey, Lara Dalton, Darrin Davies, Jason Davis, Joanne Desmond, Melissa Doyle, Nick Duigan, Julie Dunlap, Roger Dunn, Steve Elcoate, Susie Elelman, Nick Erby, Stephen Fleay, Alistair Frew, William (Ray) Gamble, Ron Garbutt, John (Jack) Gleeson, Peter Greste, Aaron Haberfield, Kellie Hampton, Clarke Hansen, Bob Hardie, Margaret van Heekeren, Doug Hogan, Christina Holmdahl, Paul Howson, Scott Hunt, Steven

Jacobs, Alistair Kingston, Greg Lederhose, Ian Leslie, Steve Liebmann, Herb, Lois and Peter Lilburn, Phil Lloyd, Antony Luciano, Prue Macsween, Steve Marshall, Richard Moran, Errol Morrison, Wendy Mudge, Wendy Mulry, Bruce Paige, Colin Pearce, Jill Ray-Black, Francene Reo, Glenn Ridge, Greg Robson, Antony Roth, Valerie Sarah, Rhonda Sharratt, Hyacinth Smith, Roy Taylor, Justin Thompson, Peter Twomey, Michael Usher, Geoff Vallance, Jim Waley, Jan Welshman, Hugh Whitfeld, Shauna Willis, Barry and Trish Wilmot, Grant Wilson. Thanks also to Bruce Priddis and anyone who I have inadvertently omitted.

I wish to thank my parents, Lorraine and Stan Thurlow, twin brother Iain, and other family and friends including my PhD colleague Ann Hine, for their encouragement and support over many years. I am especially thankful to Greg, Shona, Sarah, Matthew, Faith and Maria Curtis for their friendship and support.

I am thankful to my Associate Supervisor, Dr Jeannine Baker, for her fresh perspectives and approaches. I am, above all, deeply grateful to my Principal Supervisor, Professor Bridget Griffen-Foley, for her support, patience, advice and understanding over many years.